Hartsfield-Jackson Airport Opens New Food Court on Concourse A

Ribbon-cutting ceremony unveils eleven new dining options for passengers

ATLANTA – Hartsfield-Jackson Atlanta International Airport held a ribbon-cutting ceremony today to celebrate the grand opening of a new food court on Concourse A. The food court and the recently opened PF Chang’s add eleven new dining options for passengers on Concourse A. Celebrity Chef G. Garvin—whose restaurant Low Country New Southern Cuisine is located in the new food court— joined airport officials and other concessionaires for the ceremony.

The food court on Concourse A features three local brands—Chick-fil-A, Piece of Cake and Varasano’s Pizzeria—as well as Boars Head Deli, Abica Coffee, Low Country New Southern Cuisine, Qdoba Mexican Grill, Great Wraps, Boardwalk Burgers and Piano Bar.

“We are thrilled that passengers traveling through Concourse A will now have a variety of dining options to choose from thanks to the hard work of our concessions team and our partners, Hojeij Branded Foods,” said Hartsfield-Jackson general manager Louis Miller. “At the world’s busiest passenger airport, we are continually opening up new restaurants and shops in order to meet our costumers’ needs.”
